Reading I - A New School Unit

Use this reading for questions 3 to 5.

A school plans a new unit that includes First Peoples perspectives in every subject, not only in one special lesson. Teachers meet with local knowledge keepers to learn which stories, place names, and teachings are appropriate to share, and which should not be taught by outsiders.

The teachers also learn that including perspectives means more than adding a few facts. It means asking whose voices are heard, whose knowledge counts, and how students learn about ongoing issues such as land, language, and self government. The unit is reviewed each year with community input.

- An invented account of school planning in British Columbia
