Source IV - A Letter Never Sent

Use this reading for question 1.

When Ana was twelve, she wrote a long letter to her grandmother, who lived three states away. In the letter, Ana described her new school, her favorite books, and the garden she was growing behind her house.

Ana never sent the letter. She worried that her handwriting was messy and that her words were not good enough. She folded the letter, tucked it into a drawer, and forgot about it as the years passed.

Last summer, Ana found the letter while cleaning that same drawer. Reading her own young words made her laugh and ache at the same time. That evening, she called her grandmother and told her everything the letter had said, and more.

1 According to Source IV, what theme does the story suggest?

- A it is never too late to share words that matter
- B letters should always be written in perfect handwriting
- C old drawers should be cleaned every summer
- D phone calls are better than all other communication
